Much excitement was caused in the district last Friday when all farmers and ranchers were called to fight a prairie fire that started on Hill's Lease. In spite of the snow and wet ground the fire covered a considerable area, but was brought under control within an hour.

BERRYWATER

Mr. Jim Dew of Majorville is in the district attending harvesting operations. Mrs. Dew was a Sunday guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Sharp.

Around 11 a.m. Monday a fire, caused by the exhaust of a truck, hauling wheat from a combine on the Tony Lethbridge farm, 15 miles northeast of Vulcan, caused considerable excitement in the Berrywater district. Fanned by a strong west wind, the fire quickly consumed 15 acres of Mr. Leibfried's swathed grain, and for a moment it looked as if his whole crop would be destroyed. However, luckily, the wind changed slightly and the blaze continued east and south, into a harvested stubblefield, belonging to B. J. Mensinger. Meantime, around 40 people from the surrounding country had assembled and with the aid of wet sacks, forks and shovels and two tractor discs, the fire was brought under control before it crossed the road into the D. B. Smith field. The sympathy of the neighborhood is extended to Mrs. D. B. Smith, who was unfortunately burned about the arms and hands, in moving her car out of the line of the fire, when the

Regular Meeting Town Council

Mostly routine matters occupied the attention of the town fathers at a regular council meeting in the town office Monday evening of this week.

A by-law was introduced and passed, authorizing the town to sell Victory Bonds in the amount of $2,500 to defray the cost of construction of cement sidewalks this past summer.

Pemission was given Charles

Norcott to build an addition to his store premises. The secretary was instructed to write the provincial government, extending the thanks of the town for the grant of $7,000 towards the cost of the memorial swimming pool.

The water and sewer by-laws as amended are now in the process of final preparation for publication.

range work, boxing, semaphore and Morse. The detachment now has a strength of thirty.

Mr. Majakey has been instrumental in forming a rifle club among the students and interest in this is keen, with shooting being done at noon hours or after school. Dominion marksmen medals and shields are being competed for by the students.

Repp - Lebsack Wedding, Champion

The Evangelical Church, east of Champion, was the scene of a pretty wedding on October 12, when Edith Matilda Lebsack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lebsack of Champion, was united in marriage to Edward August Repp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Repp of Coronation. Rev. F. Vorrath officiated at the two o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown with net yoke and long, lily-pointed sleeves. Her long veil was held in place by a coronet of gardenias and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses and lily of the valley. Her only jewellery was a gold locket, a gift of the groom.

Miss Viola Lebsack attended her sister as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Alma Repp, sister of the groom, and Miss Marion Lebsack. They all wore floor-length frocks of blue, pink and green, respectively, with matching chapel veils and bouquets of pink and rose carnations.

The groom's attendant was Mr. Harold Marshman. Elmer Lebsack and Jake Goodman, cousins of the bride, were the ushers.

Miss Esther Ferguson played the wedding march and during the signing of the register Mrs. Charles Lebsack and Mrs. Henry Hartung sang "A Wedding Prayer."

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hartung. Immediately after the reception the newly-weds motored to Calgary, the honeymoon being spent in Calgary and other Southern Alberta points. Mr. and Mrs. Repp will take up residence in Calgary.

Pretty Candlelight Wedding at Calgary, Oct. 18

ADAMS-ORCUTT

Central United Church, Calgary, was the scene of a very pretty wedding at 7:30 p.m. on October 18, when, in a candle-light wedding ceremony, Lillian Virean Orcutt, older daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Orcutt of Champion, became the bride of David Roger Adams, second son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Adams of Calgary. Rev. C. A. Lawson officiated at the double-ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with palms, ferns, giant mums and candelabra. The guest pews were marked with yellow and pink spray mums and white bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of natural satin styled with a Peter Pan neckline, lily point sleeves and a torso waist featuring a wide crushed girdle which ended in a bow at the back. Her floor-length veil was held in place by a beaded coronet and she carried a shower bouquet of calla lilies and red roses. Her only jewellery was a triple strand of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a hand-made handkerchief which had also been carried by her mother and her grandmother at their respective weddings.

Mrs. Evelyn Anderson was matron-of-honor and Miss Joyce Orcutt, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. They were gowned in floor-length dresses of shell pink and don blue sheer and wore matching chapel veils held in place by floral crowns. Each carried a fan bouquet of shaggy yellow and bronze mums and yellow roses.

George Adams, brother of the groom, was best man, and Mert Klippert and Howard Orcutt ushered the guests.

Following the ceremony a reception for fifty guests was held at the Avenue Grill. Receiving with the bride party, Mrs. Orcutt, mother of the bride, was smartly gowned in a black and white silk jersey ensemble, complemented by a corsage of pink sweetheart roses, and Mrs. Adams, mother of the groom wore a navy gown with grey accessories and a corsage of red carnations.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake set off with a floral scheme of pink and yellow giant mums and white spray mums.

Mr. Oscar Sletto proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom fittingly responded.

After the reception the bride changed to a pearl grey and cerise wool dress, with grey topcoat featuring wide fur cuffs and complemented with cerise accessories and a corsage of gardenias and sweetheart roses.

The occasion was also the birthday of the bride's father and the fifty-ninth wedding anniversary of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Orcutt of Warner.

Following a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Adams will take up residence at 1609 Bowness Road, Calgary.

Shower Held At Champion For Joyce Christenson

Mrs. Fred Clever, Mrs. Guy Dow Mrs. W. A. McIntyre and Mrs. H. E. Smith were joint hostesses of a shower at Champion last week at the home of Mrs. Clever, in honor of Miss Joyce Christenson, R.N. whose marriage to Mr. Larry Hagg will be an event of Oct. 25th.

Thirty-five friends assembled to honor the bride-elect, whose chair was decorated with streamers of pale pink cascading from the ceiling. A corsage was pinned on the guest of honor by Mrs. Clever as the beautiful and practical gifts were wheeled in on a tea-wagon by other hostesses. Mrs. Smith, in presenting the gifts, expressed the wish of all for Miss Christenson's future happiness. In response, the bride-elect thanked the ladies for their kindness in remembering her even though she had been gone from their midst for some time, and extended an invitation to all to attend a trousseau tea at her parents' home on Oct. 20th.

The tea table was set with a lace cloth and centred with a silver vase of pink petunias and blue lobelia, flanked by cathedral tapers in silver holders. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses and honors at the tea urns were shared by Mrs. William Christenson mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Oscar Hagg, mother of Miss Christenson's fiancée.

Trousseau Tea

To honor her daughter, Joyce, whose marriage takes place on Friday, Oct. 25, Mrs. William Christenson entertained at a pre-nuptial tea at her home Sunday afternoon and evening. Miss Christenson assisted her mother in receiving the guests.

Baskets of spray mums in tones of gold, mauve and pink were used throughout the rooms, as were streamers of pink and white and silver bells. The attractive tea table was spread with a lace cloth and centred with a low bowl of flowers flanked by tall white tapers. Mrs. L. Christenson invited the guests to view the bride-elect's trousseau and shower and wedding gifts. About one hundred guests called during the day to offer best wishes.

Trade Board has announced.

At the same time all temporary ration coupons for butter, meat and sugar, unnumbered and bearing a beaver design, will also expire in the hands of consumers. "Beaver" coupons for evaporated milk, only, will continue to be valid.

Consumers holding unusual "Beaver" coupons, may, on application to a local ration board, have them exchanged for the newly issued "Buffalo" coupons.

Word Now Received On Fate of Harry E. Hansell

After three years, almost to the day, Mr. E. G. Hansell, M.P., has received final word as to the fate of his son, F/S Harry E. Hansell.

The Missing Research and Enquiry Services, set up under the Royal Air Force, reported that the craft in which Harry was flying crashed in a forest about one and a half miles south of Eberholzen, Germany. The aircraft exploded when it hit the ground. The entire crew was buried in the north-east corner of the town cemetery at Eberholzen. The grave, it is stated, has been nicely kept and will have constant care until such time as all casualties buried in Germany are concentrated in British military cemeteries.

Flight-Sergeant Hansell was an air-gunner in the mid-upper turret of a Halifax bomber. The target on the fatal trip was Hanover, about twenty-four miles north of where the bomber was brought down.

OUR BEST IMMIGRANTS

It has often been said that the best newcomers to this country are native-born Canadians, the new babies who add steadily to the population. They require no adjustment. They spring out of the vitality of Canadian living. Every stage of their development is in the Canadian pattern. Canada does need a greater population of this nature, and conditions should be such as to give young people assurance that they can carry out properly the responsibilities of child-bearing and child-training.

In considering the question of immigration there is the thought that Canada admits newcomers from across the seas at one door, while another steady stream of old stock Canadians pours across the line through another door. But experts claim that the two movements are not linked. It is said that no incoming immigrant crowds out a young Canadian so that he goes to the States. He goes south to better himself, not because he is being threatened in the field of labor which the immigrant fills.

Over Canada's history migrating Canadians have sought broader opportunities across the line. In the professions this country has provided excellent educational facilities, but has failed to make maximum use of these young people on graduation. So for generations the drain has been to great extent from the professional and highly skilled element with a restricted outlet in Canada. We bore the expense of training and then lost them, because we failed to create a demand for their skills.

It is maintained that the best way to retain our invaluable native population in Canada is to follow through in economic development in order that we ourselves may gain full benefit of those trained in medicine, in arts and sciences, in research. If we cannot absorb the young people whom we educate, then we should give more serious attention to correcting that gap between the education we provide, and full outlet of training received.

Either that or bring our higher education into better line with actual Canadian needs. That would be admission of failure. We know that we have a need and should have a place for every young Canadian graduating from high schools and colleges.

A much larger population through planned immigration is one way by which we can retain more of our native population. More people make more work of every type, develop more demands, expand opportunities along wider lines. Selective immigration would serve a manifold purpose in providing a new start for many homeless, displaced people of Europe, and also in building up new requirements that would absorb the talents of many who now seek their future south of the border.

roll even when no work was available for them.

Our delegates to Paris have not been happy in their criticism of fellow-delegates. Mr. King who finds it difficult to compress a ten-minute speech into half-an-hour said there was far too much talk at the conference. Mr. Claxton was irked by the manner in which important matters were rushed through during the closing hours of the conference, a complaint he often heard the opposition in parliament make since he became a member.

King Ibn Sand of Arabia wants President Truman to take a hand in curbing the excesses of Jewish extremists in Palestine, but in Mr. Truman's mind the issue will not be so pressing after the first Tuesday following the first Monday in November.

Having no candidate of their own in Portage la Prairie the Communists, God helping them, could do no other than support the C.C.F. In the last elections they supported the government, but could not do so now because Moscow has expressed its opinion of that government and its treatment of Soviet workers here.

In the Parkdale bye-election campaign, Mr. Coldwell called an interrupter a liar, and offered to give $1000 to the Prog.-Cons. party if it could be proved by Hansard that he had said he would rather see his son in jail than fighting in any European war involving Canada. The bet was a safe one because the statement was not made in parliament and was not therefore reported in Hansard. It was made in a theatre on February 14, 1937.

A gentleman of reactionary tendencies admitted the other day that Social Creditors are sound on almost all questions except Social Credit and that they would be sound on that too if Social Credit itself was sound.

That ten cents-an-hour increase in railwaymen's wages applies even to those trainmen who refused to obey the government's orders during the strike at Stelco. The moral is—well, who can say what the moral is?

Reclamation Wind Blown Land

(From Lethbridge Herald)
The other day we saw on a farm near Claresholm as neat a bit of soil reclamation as can be found in South Alberta. We all remember the drought from 1918-22, and the droughts which struck a couple of times in the thirties, when side-roads were piled high with drifted soil and when even the railway trains were being thrown off the track by soil drift; when railways snow fences were lifted two or three times and set up on top of drifted soil 20 feet high.

It was on the farm of S. C. "Bud" Williams that we saw the demonstration. He lives in the area northeast of Claresholm and southwest of Carmangay where a sand strip has for years given trouble. Mr. Williams bought a farm which had been blown so badly that there were blow holes covering an acre or two in places that were five feet or more deep. He got it cheaply and proceeded to do what the land needed. He sowed it to crested wheat grass. Other parts of the farm which were not so badly blown but which were on put on a continuous cropping basis, keeping the trash on top and using fall rye as a main crop because it adds a lot of fibre to the soil.

Then the owner started to build up a nice little herd of registered Herefords to use the grass and pasture the rye in the fall. The herd has grown now to about 60 head and they're real stuff. And the blown-out farm is now tied down. This year the part of it in wheat gave a crop of 25 bushels or better. The buildings and corrals are tops. All in all, it's a great job of reclamation and an example which should be followed on many farms in light soil areas where soil drifting has become a menace.

REPORT ON SHORTAGES

Nails, says an Albertan, were scarce even before the steel strike and now are almost impossible to find.

He himself was lucky, because a man had given him half a keg of nails only a few days ago. The man was a building contractor who had just finished work on a block of houses and was moving on to another job.

The half keg of nails, said the contractor, wasn't worth the trouble of moving it.

In case this sounds like a fairy story, it should be mentioned that the completed job was a Government housing project.—Printed Word.

The Ordinary People

(Contributed to The Calgary Herald by an Ordinary Person)

The time has arrived for the ordinary people of the world to gird on their armour and take some active role in the battle which is now being waged on the economic and political front. They have been victims of their own apathy too long.

The ordinary people of this world are not confined to any class or caste but are to be found in high and low places. They are the people who go about complaining about their business, their children, their depression. They are happy in good times, and rustle for themselves in bad times. They look for no hand-outs and expect no manna from heaven.

They are not interested in any "ism" except what perhaps might be termed let-me-alone-ism. They wish to enjoy life in the present; they wish to forget the woes of the past, and they do not want to be panicked by gruesome prophecies of a cataclysmic future.

The ordinary people far outnumber any other class, and their number is legion. But they are an unorganized mass, and being by nature peace-loving and non-violent, they are at the mercy of a minority of cranks, reformers, rabble-rousers, malcontents, and outright crooks.

This minority class is vociferous, and definitely militant, and on account of its militancy it attracts notice and gets attention out of all proportion to its size and importance. What it lacks in size it makes up for in aggressiveness and brawn. In most cases it is devoid of scruples, and when allowed to run rampant, the inevitable result is a state of affairs best depicted by a tough guy with a club intimidating a crowd of respectable and innocent bystanders.

History of very recent date bears this out. Germany, Italy, and various parts of the world have all been thrown into confusion by a few individuals with a club. Even in the United States, Al Capone might easily have pulled a coup d'etat had he possessed political ambitions instead of monetary greed.

In Canada today, we are living under conditions which are almost ideal. To some Europeans, Canada would indeed be a paradise. We have emerged victors in a great war. There is work to provide full employment at good wages for many years to come. The farmer has never been as prosperous as he is now.

There is a demand for practically all our products. Our raw materials are the envy of the world. If there ever was a time when we all should be happy and contented, it is now. But we are not. We have a bad case of national jitters.

The reason is obvious. If the ordinary people were left to themselves, they would be happy, and life might run along easily and pleasantly. But the ordinary people are not left alone. They submit to being pushed around by rough and noisy minority groups.

It is these minority groups who are precipitating all the storm and strife today, presuming to speak for millions of ordinary people who are so apathetic that they allow them to go on their way unchallenged.

There are examples of it in almost every walk of life. Union leaders dominate the lives of thousands of workers who ask only to be left alone to enjoy the wages they already command. Thousands of happy and prosperous farmers watch mutely while a few hotheads dump their cream and grain. Millions of satisfied bank depositors remain quiescent while a few disgruntled borrowers precipitate a Royal Banking Commission.

Thousands of decent citizens, moderate drinkers, submit ungrudgingly to extortion, adulteration, and restriction of their freedom on account of a few overzealous reformers; millions of newspaper readers enjoy their papers but never think to rouse themselves and write a letter of commendation to combat the pernicious critics of the press.

Beneficiaries of the capitalist system (which would include anyone who came out on the winning side of the war) listen docilely to agitators who would tear the whole system down. On a drunk at a baseball game can disrupt the entire game with his forceful demands to "kill the ump," and a thousand well behaved spectators lack the gumption to join forces and throw him out.

And so it goes. One might well paraphrase Churchill and quote "Never was so much done to so many by so few."

If they sincerely wish for peace and happiness, the ordinary people must become militant too, or if not actually militant, more vocal. They must gang up and shout down the loud-mouthed agitator. They must convert wishes for peace and happiness into action, and combine to throw out the racketeers. They must stand together with their collective chest stuck out and growl right back: "Quit shoving us around!"

To Catch Votes Make Promises

(Stettler Independent)
The ladies well know that there are three vulnerable points in the make-up of their male friends—the heart, the stomach and pocketbook. When they wish to influence the men, they appeal first of all to their hearts and to their stomachs, so that later on they can get in touch with their pocketbooks. They know quite well that a combination of sex appeal and good cooking will win men in general and contribute to their own support as a life-time job.

It stands to reason that vote-catching must work on the same principle, although candidates are hampered by lack of sex-appeal. In the old days the Romans used to gain support by giving the common people bread and circuses. In modern days the government gives us social services and family allowances and when times times get bad we are kept in line by promises of monthly dividends.

That is why it is so difficult to run a successful democracy. The supply of loot runs out and the voters will not attend meetings or even vote unless they can get something out of it. Hence our election campaigns are a wash-out unless the competing candidates promise everything in sight and at every election about 50 percent of the electors keep away from the polls.

Those, including Mr. Justice Jackson, who denounce Goering's last act on earth as an act of cowardice are placing an ill-balanced judgment on it. It was Samuel Rogers, I think, who wrote that "when all the blandishments of life are gone the coward slinks to death," but he was writing of one who had no choice between life and death, for he added "the brave live on." There was no such option given Goering, but there was an option as to the route he should take to the everlasting bonfire and he selected the cyanide path. And who wouldn't, against the more ignominious rope route?

"Cheating to the end" is the way one radio commentator put it, but Goering at the last cheated only the gallows. He is as dead now, as his fellow-convicts, and his ashes even more widely dispersed. After the first world war the Germans cheated from the start on the terms of the armistice and the peace. When they scuttled at Scapa Flow the ships they were to deliver intact under those terms the world should have known what their future course would be but the world let them get away with the fiction that the victor's terms were excessively harsh. What difference did that make to them when they had no intention to honor them anyway?

Germany is hopeless if a generation should ever arise to call those Nazi leaders heroes or patriots. There was only one in the bunch whose plea would appeal to me and that was Kettel, and all he asked was to be shot instead of hanged. In their last world's almost all protested their love of country, the last refuge of a scoundrel. Germany is beyond redemption if it falls for such protestations from the men who brought her and themselves to so ignoble and inglorious an end.

The trepidation with which people view the application for an increase in freight rates is matched only by the complacency with which they viewed the events that made the application necessary.

Hon. Herbert Morrison, a prominent member of the Socialist government, outlined the steps being taken in Britain to meet depression. Items From Bob Edwards' Inimitable "Eye Opener"

In his High River Eye Opener of Sept. 4, 1903, Bob Edwards carries a fine line of chit-chat about the placid progress of High River. He points with pride to the sliding sidewalk operating smoothly between the two hotels. He doesn't hold with the tenets of infant damnation as set down by the Presbyterian heads and consigned these old fogies to a horrible fate. And finally he put in a plug for the ability, integrity and vim of the newspaper editor as a member of parliament.

High River Eye Opener,
Sept. 4, 1903

In promoting the interests of High River it is essential that we act in unity, peace and accord. Let us all hang together now. Some of us may have to hang separately later on. In union there is strength.

J.W. Bradley who sold his building to Mr. Todd last week will build again at once. This town is certainly on a real estate boom. Mr. Bradley is in the harness and saddlery business and a master of his trade.

Veterinary Inspector Hobbs has been in the burg looking after mangy cattle. We would like to say something about this mange but have been given to understand that it is considered disloyal in High River ever to give expression to disagreeable truths.

John Rioux most popular of young men, and James Stansfield went up to Calgary on Tuesday's train. Johnny was enroute to the coast, and Mr. Stansfield has a responsible post at the Holy Cross hospital.

A new political party composed of boarders who do not like skimmed milk on their porridge could develop enough recruits and strength to compel passing of a law forbidding the serving of this obnoxious fluid.

City people may envy the farmer but not to the extent of taking advantage of the continuous opportunity to become farmers.

Picture the horror with which the intelligent and sympathetic city people receive news that there is a serious shortage in binder twine.

No fewer than 36 carpenters were on the payroll Saturday by actual count.

A consignment of mange dip has been placed at the disposal of our social butcher, Mr. Wake. He will supply all those who need it or whose animals need it.

The bridge over Tongue Creek is on the pork. The irrigation ditch is out of repair. If Mr. Oliver and Mr. Wallace want to get re-elected they know what they'd better do.

Three ladies called at our office this week claiming that garter which we advertised last week. As none of them would comply with our regulations proving ownership we still have the garter.

A High River man received a letter last week from a sheep man near Calgary who said that he had "fifty weathers to sell." They are constantly having bad spells of wether up there with plenty to dispose of.

Rapid Transit

Rapid transit is to be introduced into our pretty little burg. A moving sidewalk provided with chairs and end gates is to be constructed by a local syndicate between the two High River hotels. This is for the slobster trade, it having been found difficult on many occasions for slobsters to negotiate the distance afoot. All you do is climb on and away you go. By mutual agreement between the syndicate and hotel proprietors, no extra charge is made for those who are definitely slobsters. All others must pay 5 cents for the round trip.

Infant Damnation

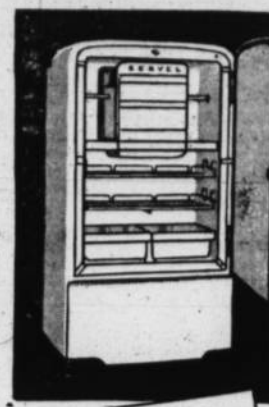

The committee on the Revision of the Presbyterian Creed sitting at Philadelphia has fixed it so that "all elect infants are saved." What this body of men know about it all is beyond our comprehension. Bespectacled old humbugs who presume to arrange amongst themselves that the non-elect infants for ever more by Satan as soon as known each other a long while.

How then does it come that when they reach his sanctum, sanctorum, hellorum. How intelligent people in this new country can put up with such nonsense beats us. But they do, and what's more they contribute money to support it. But with curiosity. The relations of editor and public are as if they'd an election comes, and the hour the elect infants go to glory, should be made to shovel clinkers.

What Is Meaning Of Parity Price?

What are parity prices for farm products?

Ask the economist and he will tell you that so many factors enter into the question that it would be well nigh impossible to determine the parity price of any specific product.

One of the first things to do would be to determine how much it costs a farmer to produce, say a bushel of wheat. That depends on the methods the farmer uses, on his location in the wheat-producing area, on how much labor he hires, what type of seed he uses, whether his crop is good or fair, or just plain bad.

Then there would be the question of how much the farmer received for that bushel. On a quick answer it could be said that he gets the official price of $1.55 a bushel—but, wait, there are other factors.

That price goes for the best grade—No. 1 Northern—and it is paid on the basis of delivery at Fort William, Port Arthur or Vancouver. Freight rates, depending on the distance of the farmer from those points, must be taken into account and the grade of the wheat—and the price paid—goes down in relation to the area in which it is grown and the condition of the crop produced.

Again, there is the complicated matter of what it costs the farmer to buy the equipment and other things he needs. All that would be based on what the farmer bought, where he bought it and whether his taste was for better or poorer quality merchandise.

And all that, says the economist would apply to only one farmer, let alone the hundreds of thousands who daily work the soil across Canada and each of whom has his special needs, cultivates his special way and sells his special product.

So "parity price" becomes an unwieldy term, so difficult to define that the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the No. 1 organization representing Canadian farmers long ago dropped it from its vocabulary because endless discussion at conventions proved that no two men thought of it in the same light.

Perhaps the nearest approach to a solution lies in the work now being done by the agricultural prices support board, which since it went into operation last April 1 has been gathering statistics on the income and costs of farmers.

This information will be used by the board when the time comes for it to go into action to maintain stability in the prices of farm products.—Lethbridge Herald.

On October 28, J. M. Campbell of Stavely is selling by public auction his purebred Herefords, with J. Allen Baker as auctioneer. North Railway A Possibility

(Lethbridge Herald)

While Alberta is thinking in terms of highways and air routes to link it with Alaska no less an authority than the U.S. Secretary of the Interior, during a visit to Alaska, whose affairs are under the eye of his department, called for the construction of a railway out of Alaska through Western Canada to tie up at the border with U.S. railway transportation. Coming from such a source, the suggestion cannot be treated other than seriously. The Secretary of the Interior found Alaska handicapped by lack of expeditious transportation to get its products to the people who want it. Evidently he found the sea route only helpful to the resources close to the coast that it was not useful to the interior. No matter what thoughts he had in his mind he didn't hesitate to come out flatfootedly for a railway into Canada. That leads us to express the belief that if there is continued mineral development in the North West Territories, in places like Yellowknife and Great Bear Lake, and Fort Norman, there will be a demand for a railway to carry out their products. Alaska's needs and North West Territories requirements, plus those of northern British Columbia might some day justify a railway.

Soil Erosion by Wind And Flood on Farms

Is Canada Developing "Dead" Land Through Lack of Intelligent Conservation?

A variation from the customary "Bank Letter" is provided in the August issue of the Royal Bank publication. This takes the form of an article on the necessity of intelligent soil conservation if the human beings of the world are to be fed.

The introductory paragraph says "Tourists find the eroded hoodoos of Banff picturesque. They marvel over the bad lands of South Dakota, the many colored pillars in Utah. But they seldom give a thought to the fact that these are dead lands. They died because they were unprotected from sun and wind, and denuded of water. Millions of acres in Canada may become dead unless heed is given to conservation. The response people make now to the demand for conservation will spell the difference between food and famine in the next few generations."

Speaking of the need in Eastern Canada, it is stated that in New Brunswick one week of high water in the St. John carries down as much silt as would give one inch coverage for over 3000 acres. In Ontario good agricultural lands are being swept away in flood, and the silt ruins the rivers for breeding and feeding fish.

Turning to the west, it is pointed out that the greatest difficulties of settlement have been drought and erosion. The Palliser report of 1857 showed the area of arid plains extending in a triangle from Brandon to Waterton, with apex near Saskatoon. But despite this and similar reports settlement followed. But the fluctuations resulting to crop from variation in rainfall are shown in comparison of two years. In 1928 with abundant rainfall Saskatchewan had a 24.3 bushel average. In 1937, a drought year, the average was 2.6 bushels.

"As early as 1887 severe drifting from wind was reported from the Indian Head experimental station. In Monarch, Alberta, was the first determined effort to control drifting and it is regarded as the most successful Canadian area of control.

"Soil does not blow if adequately covered with vegetation, and does not wash away if there are forests to soak up rainfall on the heights, and grass to halt the flow on slopes or on the level.

"Scientists tell us that it takes nature about five hundred years to make one inch of good topsoil, but this precious source of food and living is being washed from beneath our feet or blown into the air at terrific rates.

"The millions of tons of Canada's fertile topsoil which have been washed into the ocean cannot be replaced, and certain natural processes of erosion cannot be completely stopped, though the losses can be reduced to moderate proportions. The Palliser triangle will not be safe until dust storms cease there, the land nailed down by the roots of grass and by scientific mechanical usages. There will never be more land, but there is still time to save what we have, if Canadians take notice of the need.

Progress

Speaking of steps that have been taken the report refers to the work of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act on the open plains. The cultural work has benefited directly or indirectly more than 12 million acres of farm land, and possibly one million acres by regrassing. Tree planting as part of home

Other Results A.F.U. Strike

When the A.F.U. strike was at its height more than 30 dairy plants in Alberta were closed down and certain small centres felt shortages in milk, cream and eggs. At four packing plants in Edmonton more than 1200 employees were laid off. In Saskatchewan about 600 packing plant employees were laid off at one time, and co-operative creamery plants had a 20% drop in receipts in Northern Saskatchewan.

Hog prices dropped sharply just before the strike was ended, in anticipation of a flood of stock.

According to Fred Kennedy of relations between U.F.A., A.F.A. the Calgary Herald, diplomatic and A.F.U. were close to breaking point after a charge of A.F.U. speakers that the Alberta Federation and the U.F.A. "no longer represent the man on the land."

Some A.F.U. directors have come out publicly with the advocacy of direct action which would mean entrance into the political field.

The proposed merger of A.F.A., U.F.A. and A.F.U. which was almost completed, has received a setback.

building and providing shelter belts has been greatly stimulated. Individual or small water development work is directly benefiting some 25,000 farmers, while thousands more are being served by community projects. Fifty district experiment substations were established on different soil types and under different climatic conditions, where the success of such measures as strip farming, scientific crop rotation, ploughless fallow, trash cover, cloddy culture, cover crops and types of machinery different from those commonly used could be proven. Irrigation deserves a volume in itself, not only because of its conservation possibilities, but because it adds so much to the earning capacity of certain lands.

"Other things are needed, of course. There needs to be afforestation of the upper catchment areas of rivers, with proper and sustained management of both these reserves and other forested lands. Limitation of herds and flocks is needed in accordance with what the vegetation can support.

"Whatever can be done, starting now, should be begun by farmers and all organizations even remotely concerned. There will doubtless be years of abundant rainfall, timed just right to produce the best crops and hold down the land, bringing consequent temptation to neglect conservation practices, though every thinking farmer knows that the best time to prepare against bad years is during the good years.

"It was remarked that there is no more land to be had than the earth already provides. This does not mean that there are no new frontiers to challenge the farmer. Soil conservation opens up fresh opportunities like the discovery of a new West. Those who attempt it are transforming nature consciously, according to a plan, not merely taking what nature offers."

Beware Stinkweed

Attention is called by the Dairy Branch to the special care required at this time of year to prevent weed flavors on milk and cream. Stinkweed, the source of one of the most disagreeable of these flavors, makes rapid growth on summer-fallow early in the fall and may be eaten by cows when in the tender stage. Wherever possible, milk cows should be kept off all pastures and fields infested with this weed. If this is not practicable cows should be removed from stinkweed infested fields at least three or four hours before milking. The longer the interval the less the possibility of tainted milk.

Another source of stinkweed flavour is the screening at threshing settings which contain stinkweed seeds. The substance causing the distinctive flavour of stinkweed is highly concentrated in these seeds. All screenings around threshing machines should be removed or burned before allowing milk cows to pasture such fields.

If taint is suspected, each cow should be milked into an empty pail, so that by taste and smell the cows producing the tainted milk can be determined. The tainted milk can then be separated by itself or used for feeding livestock on the farm. Carefully check and test the flavour of cream from each individual separation before adding to the shipping can.

FACE REALITIES

A speech at Zurich, Switzerland recently, by Winston Spencer Churchill, in which he called upon France and Germany to form a partnership which will be the basis of a western United States of Europe, is expected to stir up as much of a hornets' nest as the Wallace speech, and the Truman reaction. Russia is certain to interpret it as an attempt to further the so-called ring of steel around herself. The former Nazi dictator used to talk about that ring of steel with good effect upon the German people. We may be sure the tune will be played in Russia where the people will be warned to work hard and deny themselves to make themselves strong against the war to come against the capitalists. France has been somewhat shocked by the Churchill declaration, for the French have twice been invaded this century by the German hordes. But the Soviet hand in Finland, Poland, Romania, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Albania following the swallowing up of the White Russian republics has already forced upon the people of Western Europe a realization that they must co-operate if they, too, are not to be swallowed up.—Lethbridge Herald.

Lower Tax Outlook
In Canada Next Year

(Lethbridge Herald)

In many industries during the war the taxes paid by companies and partnerships were many times the amount available for dividends to shareholders.

Now, however, there are hopes that these taxes may be very considerably eased in 1947. It will be remembered that U.S. excess profits taxes were abolished almost immediately after Japan surrendered. The first act of the Attlee Government in Britain was to abolish excess profits taxes altogether in its 1946 Budget, an action which surprised many since it was taken by a socialist government. In the Canadian Budget brought down last June by Finance Minister Ilsley, excess profits taxes were cut to 60 per cent applicable to 1947 business, which leaves industry holding the small end of the stick, though excess profits on personal companies and partnerships were abolished as from the first of next year.

Hope that excess profits taxes may be abolished in Canada as in Great Britain and U.S. has risen as a result of buoyant revenues during 1946. An interim report from the Finance Ministry recently showed that revenues for the first seven months of 1946 were $152,000,000 over the estimated revenue for that period, and that total revenue for the Dominion this year will very considerably exceed the $250,000,000 which the Budget called for. With rehabilitation and demobilization expenses largely met out of the revenues of 1945 and 1946, there is good ground for hoping for a lower tax scale next year in both personal income and corporation income taxes, and that the excess profits tax may either be wholly abolished or cut considerably. Indeed, there is talk of a balanced Budget this year instead of the budgeted deficit of $430,000,000.

Evidence has been presented during the past few days to show that there has been a hesitation in business and industry to expand production while the excess profits tax is taking most of the gains. Tax relief would go a long way to encourage business and industry, and if Finance Minister Ilsley can announce considerable tax reductions in his 1947 Budget post-war recovery in Canada will show a marked improvement.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to extend my sincere thanks to the hunters who came to my help this week when my swathed wheat was attacked by ducks. I especially wish to thank Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Nafziger and Andrew for their timely aid. I feel sure that it saved the greater part of my crop.—David S. Smith.

Farm Radio
Forum Oct. 28

The National Farm Radio Forum will return to the air on Monday, Oct. 28 at 8:30 p.m. This is its seventh season. The first topic is "The farmer and the future," and other topics during the season will include farm price program, farm taxes, farm research and is designed for listening, discussion, reporting and action. To accomplish these to the best advantage organize a listening group or plan to hold the regular meeting of your farm local on Monday nights.

The first step after listening to the program is to enter into discussion of the broadcast. You will be surprised how much you or your neighbors can add to what you have already heard. The second step, reporting to the Provincial Secretary, lays the foundation for farm opinion. These reports are summarized for the Provincial News broadcast and are forwarded to the National office where they are passed on to government officials and others who wish to know what the farmer is thinking.

The final step in any program is action and organized action through the farm local, listening group or a number of groups, is more effective. It is not for the writer of this article to say what action project is needed in your district. Maybe it is repairs on the Community Hall. It could be a local skating rink or the laying of plans for a more extensive weed control program for next Spring.

Fire Prevention

If ever there was need for a Fire Prevention Week, that necessity has been amply demonstrated by the trend of fire losses, in both life and property, which have occurred during the past year. It is quite true that Fire Prevention is a year round job, but the custom of observing a special week to impress upon the public the necessity of preventing fires has developed over a period of twenty-five years and has become a national tradition.

And well it might be. The loss of 391 lives and $42,000,000 property damage by fire in 1945 should stir every Canadian out of a complacency which threatens our national economy. Appeals to individuals to prevent fires on a strictly abstract basis seem to have had little effect. More often it is only when a person's pocketbook is affected that he begins to sit up and take notice. It is obvious therefore that, unless the present trend of increasing fire losses can be checked, fire insurance companies will have no other alternative than to increase their rates. In 1921, the average rate per $100 of property against fire was $1.11 and, in 1941, it was 67 cents. In the face of rising fire losses, it is a question how long the insurance companies will be able to operate successfully on these low rates. And there is no doubt out that an increase in rates will have an effect on the cost of living, for modern commerce has been developed upon the ability to insure against unforeseen losses and the cost of insurance enters into everything we buy.

Every Canadian citizen will therefore be wise if he takes into consideration the fact that he will eventually have to pay for his own carelessness. He should resolve that the responsibility for such an increase in the cost of living shall not be his. He can do this by being careful about the disposition of his cigarettes and matches, by seeing that the heating equipment in his home is in a safe condition, by not using flammable liquids like kerosene to start the kitchen fire or gasoline for cleaning or other use in the home. By these and many other means, he can avoid the dangers of fire not only to himself and his own family, but also to his neighbor and his neighbor's family. And by keeping in mind care, prudence and forethought, not only during Fire Prevention Week but for every week during the year he can make of his country, Canada, a place of beauty rather than a country where stark ruins lie and gaunt chimneys rise on every hand to accuse him of his carelessness.

The Queen Elizabeth, the world's largest ship, is back to her peacetime role of luxury liner. She made her first peacetime voyage to New York on Oct. 16.

An Alberta bred cow pony raised by McMillan of Lethbridge came first in the 30 mile Spokane marathon last week. But judges decided the second pony wound up in better condition so it got the prize. The Alberta bred pony was somewhat similar to Floyd Haynes marathon winner.
